Slender Man Possession

What caused two otherwise benign 12-year old pre-teen girls in Waukesha, Wisconsin to plot to murder a friend? Slender Man told them to do it, was the explanation, and it was kill or be killed.

Charges Detail Waukesha Pre-Teens' Attempt to Kill Classmate

The 12-year-old girls had been plotting the murder for months. Both suspects explained the stabbing to police referencing their dedication to Slender Man, the character they discovered on a website. Weier said that Geysler told her they should become "proxies" of Slender Man — a paranormal figure known for his ability to create tendrils from his fingers and back — and kill their friend to prove themselves worthy of him. When asked about Slender Man, Geysler said she had never met him but said he watches her and he can read minds and teleport.

Stabbed her 19 Times' to Prove 'Slender Man' Myth was Real

The paranormal creature stalks, abducts and traumatizes children for its own amusement. It can also supposedly control people and communicate telepathically.

Who is Slender Man? He appeared on a website in 2009, in association with children who seemed to be his prey. One of the Waukesha girls reported that she felt if she did not follow his directives, to kill, she herself would become a target. Were their parent's aware of this? Apparently, to some degree, yes.

He is Slenderman, a menacing, faceless specter in a dark suit - sometimes portrayed with octopus-like tentacles - known to haunt children and those who seek to expose him. He was born in 2009 in an online forum for people who enjoy creating fake supernatural images.

Newly-Released 911 Call Reveals the Moment Bicyclist Found 'Slender Man' Stabbing Victim

June 4, 2014

<http://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-2648586/Newly-released-911-call>

Geyser's obsession with the mythical man was something her parents seemed to be aware of as well, as her father proudly shared a crayon drawing his daughter drew of Slender Man while they were out to dinner one night.

This does not seem to be a crime of passion, out of anger or jealousy or blind rage, nor do the girls seem mentally ill. This likewise does not seem to fit the typical possession case where someone has a complete personality change. In the Miami Zombie case and the Dark Knight case, there was a personality change, as noted in this newsletter. But the Zetas have described a different kind of possession, which they call a group possession, described within ZetaTalk in the past to explain the Melchizedek cult.

ZetaTalk Description 11/15/1996: Among the many alien groups attempting to assist in the Transformation is one speaking to a channeler known as Melchizedek. A key tenet of the cult is possession of the human converts by Service-to-Self entities who convince the incarnating spirit to step aside now and then, especially during meetings and initiation rites. The humans drawn into the cult are told that this possession, a temporary walk-in by an intensely Service-to-Self oriented spirit, is an honor, that the possessing spirit has wisdom beyond what any human can muster, purity of purpose, and a spiritual focus that will benefit mankind. As the cult members are invariably weak, often abused individuals virtually taken off the streets, they revel in the strength they feel in the presence of or during possession by the visiting Service-to-Self entities.

Per the Zetas, the Slender Man entity does indeed respond to a Service-to-Self Call with contact, telepathic messages, and at times possession of those giving the Call in what the Zetas call a group possession. The Zetas explain.

ZetaTalk Explanation 6/7/2014: This episode was an example of a group possession, in which a group of weak individuals allows a strong Service-to-Self spirit to influence them. Unlike traditional possession where the possessing spirit remains in the human who has invited it and creates dramatic chaos and violence, these group possessions are low-key and often not recognized by others. The motives in the possessing spirits differ in these two scenarios. In group possession there is a different agenda, which is a slow erosion of the group so that only Service-to-Self behavior emerges. It is noteworthy that the Slender Man mythology centers around the Slender Man's interaction with children, who are easily frightened and feel helpless to fight the adults in their lives, much less one who is tall, has many tentacles, and can appear and disappear at will. The Stockholm syndrome develops, whereby the helpless one embraces and wants to bond with their oppressor. The girls are not psychotic, though will likely be diagnosed as such, and did indeed have their dreams and thoughts influenced by the Slender Man entity.

Giving the Call, and whom one calls for counseling, is in the hands of humans giving the Call and is driven by the spiritual orientation of the incarnating soul. Selfish? You call the Service-to-Self. Caring? You call the Service-to-Other entities. The Zetas have since the start of the ZetaTalk saga emphasized this. Service-to-Self entities cannot harm you, they can only work by influencing humans to harm each other. And these Waukesha girls said “yes”, not “no” to Slenderman's evil suggestions.

ZetaTalk Advice 7/15/1995: As spiritual entities allowed to have contact with humans are either Service-to-Self or Service-to-Others, their orientation is acute and easily discernible. One has but to pay attention. A firm line should be drawn. If one has determined not to join the Service-to-Self orientation, and is leaning toward cooperation and empathy with other entities, then the line should be drawn, absolutely.

Compare the actions of those who are weak and self-focused, whether young teens or adults, with the action of Service-to-Other individuals. Even a cat can show its essential Service-to-Other orientation! Did this cat defer to danger or intimidation? Even a cat understands one stands up to evil! Just say no!

December 18, 2012

Larry DePrimo was hailed as an officer and a gentleman after an Arizona tourist immortalized him in a photo giving a barefoot homeless man a pair of boots. The young cop, who has been on the job for two years, said he didn't even know someone had taken the picture. "I looked over and someone was laughing at this elderly gentleman who had no socks (and) no shoes," he said. "You could see the blisters from a distance. It was a very, very cold night." A few minutes later, the kindhearted cop bought a $100 pair of all-weather boots, size 12. A store manager applied his employee discount to lower the price.

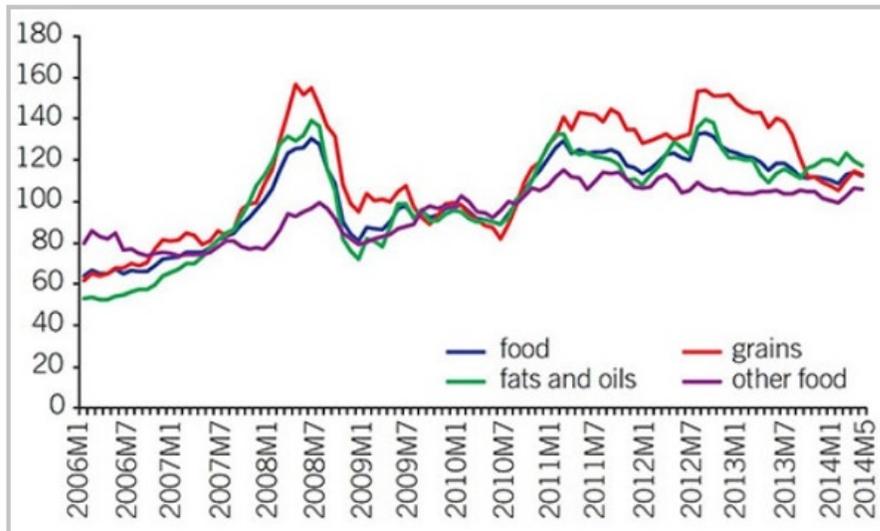

Who is the Student who Pounced on the Seattle Gunman? A Hero, Many Say

I wasn't surprised to see he was the hero - his resourcefulness, love for others and knowledge of the greater good are what defines him. Meis, an engineering student, has a reputation for keeping a low profile, not seeking attention. He is known as a devout Christian and an excellent student. "Greater love has no one than this: to lay down one's life for one's friends. (Jn 15:13)".

Population Control

No, we're not talking about birth control, but controlling the population in the future when the erratic weather with drought and deluge and floods have created severe crop shortages, when starvation is rampant, when earthquakes have trashed the cities and made food distribution impossible, and when governments will be faced with more desperate citizens than they can handle. Weather extremes, crop shortages, and earthquakes are on the increase already, but after the Pole Shift the globe will be virtually trashed. Then what? The price of food is already rising, worldwide, as noted three years ago in Issue 235 of this newsletter.

World Bank Warns of Food Riots as Rising Food Prices Push World Populations Toward Revolt

May 30, 2014

http://www.naturalnews.com/045369 World Bank food riots

A new report issued by the World Bank warns that food prices are skyrocketing globally. Rising food prices have caused 51 food riots in 37 countries since 2007. These include Tunisia, South Africa, Cameroon and India, among other nations. When the People are starving in the streets, there is political unrest that can easily turn violent. Genetically modified crops are genetically vulnerable to disease because they are mono-culture crops with little genetic diversity. Permaculture advocates are warning that the global seed supply has been deliberately collapsed by biotech companies which routinely buy up small seed companies and shut them down. The intention is to create seed monopolies and eliminate competing alternatives to patented, corporate-controlled seeds. A nation practicing food security would encourage home gardens and support decentralized food production that includes urban food production. Interestingly, nations like Cuba and Russia have encouraged precisely these practices, which is why they are more resistant to a food supply collapse.

Being able to provide clean water, food, and shelter to its citizens after disasters is key to preventing riots, as Moslow's pyramid of needs so aptly describes. If one is about to drown, or is starving, being a polite citizen is not the top priority. People will be desperate.

So how are governments planning to handle such situations? Obama's Executive Orders give a hint. EO 13575, written in 2011, showed an intent to focus the federal agencies on rural area, which is where huge numbers of refugees from cities trashed by earthquakes and floods would be directed. Survival camps, where everyone gardens and grows food, would be the focus. Why else the emphasis in EO 13575? Then we have EO 13603 written in 2012, which has a more direct focus on commandeering farming supplies and equipment with which to feed the populace. Martial law in the land, with a goal of food production and distribution. EO 13603 reads, in part:

Executive Order - National Defense Resources Preparedness
March 16, 2012

<http://www.whitehouse.gov/the-press-office/2012/03/16/executive-order-national-defense>

Sec. 201. to allocate materials, services, and facilities as deemed necessary or appropriate to promote the national defense, is delegated to the following agency heads: (1) the Secretary of Agriculture with respect to food resources, food resource facilities, livestock resources, veterinary resources, plant health resources, and the domestic distribution of farm equipment and commercial fertilizer; (5) the Secretary of Defense with respect to water resources.

Sec. 801. the following definitions apply throughout this order: (c) "Farm equipment" means equipment, machinery, and repair parts manufactured for use on farms in connection with the production or preparation for market use of food resources. (d) "Fertilizer" means any product or combination of products that contain one or more of the elements nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium for use as a plant nutrient. (e) "Food resources" means all commodities and products, (simple, mixed, or compound), or complements to such commodities or products, that are capable of being ingested by either human beings or animals, irrespective of other uses to which such commodities or products may be put, at all stages of processing from the raw commodity to the products thereof in vendible form for human or animal consumption. (f) "Food resource facilities" means plants, machinery, vehicles (including on farm), and other facilities required for the production, processing, distribution, and storage (including cold storage) of food resources, and for the domestic distribution of farm equipment and fertilizer (excluding transportation thereof).

ZetaTalk Analysis 7/23/2011: We revealed a year ago the FEMA plan under Obama, to deal with potentially millions of homeless during forthcoming disasters in the US. Executive Order 13575 is proof that this is the plan, despite whatever interpretation conspiracy websites might conclude. This is not part of the New World Order, nor is it targeting small farms or actively productive agricultural land. Take a look at the list of agencies in order 13575, 25 in total. It encompasses the entire federal government under the control of the Executive Branch!

Recent stories in the news have hinted that the US Military will in future be focused on starving refugees, either among US citizens or around the world where they might be creating instability.

Is Climate Change Real? The Pentagon Sure Thinks So

May 9, 2014

<http://www.nbcnews.com/news/military/climate-change-real>

U.S. military and intelligence agencies are increasingly monitoring and preparing for how, when and where the consequences of a warmer planet will collide with national security, requiring the eventual need to deploy American troops to weather-torn lands. Current and former Department of Defense officials are mapping future strategies to protect U.S. interests in the aftermath of massive floods, water shortages and famines that are expected to hit and decimate unstable nations. Among U.S. security and military strategists, perhaps an even higher concern involves already unstable governments and fragile societies that probably would not withstand mass weather disasters. If those governments crumble, terrorists could fill the resulting power voids. Therein is a recipe for the kind of instability that will inevitably involve the United States in humanitarian assistance, disaster relief or, indeed, in a regional conflict.

The Age of Climate Warfare is here. The Military-Industrial Complex is Ready. Are You?

May 31, 2014

<http://www.rawstory.com/rs/2014/05/31/the-age-of-climate-warfare-is-here>

During his speech at West Point Military Academy earlier this week, President Barack Obama described climate change as a “creeping national security crisis” that will require the armed forces to “respond to refugee flows, natural disasters, and conflicts over water and food.” The speech emphasised that US foreign policy in the 21st century is increasingly being honed in recognition of heightened risks of social, political and economic upheaval around the world due the impacts of global warming. A more detailed insight into US military planning could be seen in the report published a couple of weeks earlier by the Center for Naval Analyses (CNA) Military Advisory Board, written and endorsed by a dozen or so senior retired US generals.

If this is Obama’s concern, what about the wealthy elite? The ultra-rich, the bankers and corporate barons, those with inherited wealth who want to remain on the top of the pile? They are used to their opulent lifestyles and think of their wealth as a means of controlling the common man.

ZetaTalk Description 8/28/2010: The thinking of the elite, which is of course not a single mind-set but a group of individuals, is that a gray area does not apply. It is black or white. Either the populace is blind and ignorant and life goes on as it does today, with the elite on top, or the populace knows and their lifestyle is at risk. If only 1% of the populace might riot and put the enclaves of the elite at risk, or block the roads and airways when they wanted to make their escape, then this is not an acceptable option. Those who are among the elite are in this position - being extremely wealthy or politically powerful or in charge of large corporations - because having wealth and power are the most important thing in the world, to them. This is black and white. Either they are on top of the pile or they are not, and thus they will not risk losing any of it.

ZetaTalk Description 10/8/2011: As we have often mentioned, the elite expect to emerge from their bunkers and return to shopping. They expect mankind's infrastructure to be repaired by the vast faceless army of workers, the common man, that has always provided them with their cushy lifestyle. Private militias are, of course, already in place too. This is also true of stocks and bonds, deeds, and any of the myriad paper assets that the elite assume will have worth in the Aftertime.

The Zetas have long warned that the common man should beware of offers by the elite for food and housing where they will find themselves virtual slaves of the elite. The rich keep getting richer, and the poor getting poorer, as was recently detailed in Issue 399 of this newsletter. What the money buys, in part, is farmland and water rights!

Corporations and Wealthy Elites now Control more than 75 Percent of the World's Farmland
May 28, 2014

<http://www.rawstory.com/rs/2014/05/28/corporations-and-wealthy-elites>

The world's food supplies are at risk because farmland is becoming rapidly concentrated in the hands of wealthy elites and corporations. Small farmers grow 70% of the world's food but a new analysis of government data suggests the land which they control is shrinking every year as mega-farms and plantations squeeze them onto less than 25% of the world's available farmland. These mega-farms are less productive in terms of amount of food they produce per area of land. The report suggests that the single most important factor in the drive to push small farmers onto ever smaller parcels of land is the worldwide expansion of industrial commodity crop farms. The powerful demands of food and energy industries are shifting farmland and water away from direct local food production to the production of commodities for industrial processing.

Carlyle Executed 'Bait and Switch' on Mountain Water

In early 2011, well before its purchase of Park Water Company and Mountain Water Company, Carlyle Infrastructure recognized that it was highly uncertain whether the Montana Public Service Commission would approve its acquisition. Engen is seeking to acquire Mountain Water to put control of Missoula's drinking water system in the hands of the public.

Four Dollars for a Gallon of Water?

April 18, 2012

http://www.naturalnews.com/035603_water_monopoly_privatization

Four dollars for a gallon of gas is ridiculous enough, but $4 for a gallon of water could someday become a reality, that is if oil tycoons like T. Boone Pickens and water bottling companies have their way. Privatization of water in which companies control the public's water sources and free water is a thing of the past appears to be what Pickens and corporations such as Monsanto, Royal Dutch Shell, and Nestle are banking on to increase their vast fortunes.

Monsanto's history is a casebook on the elite desire to control the populace via food and water rights. Their attempt to insert a terminator gene into seed, so that farmers must buy seed from Monsanto and thus Monsanto controls food production, worldwide, is legend. This attempt failed, only because of public outcry. They have likewise sought to control water rights. Monsanto be gone!

Monsanto Moves to Control Water Resources & Fish Farming
June 3, 1999

<http://www.purefood.org/Monsanto/waterfish.cfm/>

Monsanto is now trying to establish its control over water. During 1999, Monsanto plans to launch a new water business, starting with India and Mexico since both these countries are facing water shortages. Monsanto plans to earn revenues of $420 million and a net income of $63 million by 2008 from its water business in India and Mexico. By 2010, about 2.5 billion people in the world are projected to lack access to safe drinking water. At least 30 per cent of the population in China, India, Mexico and the U.S. is expected to face severe water stress.

Terminator Gene Halt a 'Major U-Turn'
October 5, 1999

<http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/science/nature/465222.stm>

Inserting terminator genes into crops would prevent them from producing fertile seeds, meaning farmers would have to buy new seeds, rather than saving part of their harvest to plant next year's crop. The move was a major reverse: terminator technology was the lynchpin of a strategy to protect corporate royalties in developing countries.
